Thanks Steve,

We have some follow up questions that would help us finalize the analysis

1. Could you walk us through the economics of a typical installment purchase, from the swipe through to final payment? We're mainly after the revenue lines and their timing: what you earn on the transaction itself (interchange, net of network and processor costs), what's charged upfront at origination, and what accrues over the term. Plus the flow of funds: who pays whom, when, and which entity each flow lands in.
2. Do the same walkthrough for a revolving balance and for a pay-in-full statement, so we can see how the three products differ economically.
3. Define what the "installment fees" field in the tape contains: the upfront origination fee, the monthly add-on interest, or both combined.
4. Confirm the fee schedule: add-on rate by tenor, and the origination fee formula. We have been told $0.5\% \times \text{number of months}$ (3% on a 6-month term). Confirm or correct. Is the fee netted from the disbursement or financed into the balance? Is it refundable on prepayment, and is unearned add-on interest rebated?
5. The tape shows late fees and installment fees but no interchange, no annual fee, no upfront fee, no cash advance fee, etc. Is that because those revenues do not attach to the receivable, or because they were excluded from the extract?
6. What is your net interchange as a percentage of GMV for the last six months (if possible, split domestic vs international)?
7. Both your revolving rate (3%/month) and installment add-on (1%/month) sit exactly at the BSP ceilings. Confirm there is no pricing headroom, and tell us what happens to program economics if BSP cuts the ceiling at a semiannual review.
8. What's the basis for the ~2% loss figure provided (30+/90+ DPD, annualized NCL, cumulative) and its denominator? We'd also appreciate your charge-off policy in DPD, any change to it since launch, and your approach to restructures/re-aging.

I know some of it we touched last time so apologies, but this would help the team. Also would love to have a follow up call, can you share some times that work for you?

Raymond

Ah, no worries. I'm in SF right now with our US team.

Tomorrow (8/12) at 3:30pm Panama Time works great! Talk then.

Hi Steve,

I initially thought the earlier times would be better given the time difference, but early afternoon works even better for us.

How about Wednesday, Aug 12 at 3:30pm Panama time?

If that doesn't work, Friday Aug 14 or Monday Aug 17 at 1:00pm, 2:00pm, 3:00pm, or 4:00pm (all Panama time) also work.

Best,
Raymond

Hi Steve,

Thanks for this, and for the 90+ recovery breakdown. We'll review it shortly.

Happy to jump on a quick call on 5.1. A few options that work on our side (all Panama time):

- Thursday, Aug 13 at 8:00am
- Friday, Aug 14 at 11:30am
- Monday, Aug 17 at 8:00am

If none of those work, just let us know what is best for you and we can make it work.

Best,
Raymond

Hey Raymond – Hope all is good! We wanted to follow up on item 4.2 in the Diligence Questions. Please find a break down of the 90+ DPD Recoveries on the "90+ Recovery Summary" tab. We've added a few columns to the original Statement Tape tab so you can easily trace back how these recoveries were derived from the original data. Don't hesitate to let us know if you have any questions on this. Separately, we're working on pulling together a detailed breakdown of each installment plan, broken down on a purchase by purchase basis (item 5.2).

Lastly, let us know when you have time to discuss 5.1 on a quick call.

Thanks!
Steve

Nice to e-meet you! Please see attached initial responses to your team's questions. A few items remain, but we wanted to pass along in the interim.

Let us know if you'd like to set up some time to discuss; we wanted to clarify intent/scope for requests like 5.1 in the Diligence Responses excel.

The additional attachments are referenced in the responses (unit economics and updated statement tape).

Hi Steve,

We went through everything,. We like it a lot. Product traction is real and the balance sheet is clean. We want to keep moving forward.

Where we need to go deeper is the asset side: today we see the book monetizes flow rather than credit, so the path to revolving, timing, pricing, eligibility is the central question for us, along with a formal charge-off framework. The attached questions and data requests lay out our next steps. Happy to walk through any of it on a call.

Best,
Raymond

Hi Ray – it was fantastic to connect a few weeks back. I'm sorry about the delay on my side. There were a few product priorities that I needed to focus on as we closed out the quarter. I finally had a chance to review the NDA. My markup is attached. Nothing major or controversial other than a request to change the governing law to the State of California. I added a first line of defense as arbitration and a arbitration venue of Miami to hopefully make it logistically and practically easier for FPF.

Excited to push this process forward!!
